“When Mbaya was a child, he got very excited when his mother, Corfu, asked if he would like to go to the meat market with her. As they walked into the centre of town, the wonderful odours of meat — both fresh and spoiled — could be smelled up to one kilometre away. The hundreds of market stalls formed a row of almost 1 and ½ kilometres long. It took almost one hour to walk slowly from one end of the meat market to the other.

“Sometimes Corfu would let Mbaya choose what meat they would buy that morning. The smell of fresh beef was Mbaya’s favorite. But sometimes Mbaya would accidentally choose the beef that was not fresh. Corfu would go up close to the big piece of meat hanging from the rack and smell it. Once she was close to it, Corfu could tell immediately that the beef was not fresh. Then, she would laugh at Mbaya and tease him for picking spoiled meat. But the meat seller would be angry, as Corfu let on to other shoppers that his beef was not fresh. Mbaya would then start looking around for beef that seemed more fresh, no longer trusting that his nose is the best instrument for finding fresh meat.”
