ABSTRACT

The National Reading Barometer is a project of the Nal'ibali Trust, a national reading for enjoyment campaign, in partnership with the National Library of South Africa. The Barometer investigates South African reading cultures and contexts through a nationally representative reading survey and the collection of secondary data. The results of the ongoing reading surveys will be compared over time, beginning with the results of the National Reading Survey 2016 (conducted by the South African Book Development Council) and surveys to be conducted in 2026 and 2030. The findings from the Barometer surveys and other studies will inform research, policy and practice related to reading in South Africa.

Scope

NOTES

The National Reading Survey collects data on:

1. The reading cultures and practices of South African adults, to understand why people read and don't read, including with children, and how they feel about reading;
2. Access to reading materials, by type and language, including digital materials and reading material for children;
3. Changes in attitudes to and behaviour related to reading over time, based on the results of ongoing survey research

Coverage

GEOGRAPHIC COVERAGE

The findings from the National Reading Survey are nationally representative. The data is weighted by Province, population group and age group.

GEOGRAPHIC UNIT

The lowest level of geographic aggregation in the data is Province.
